Statistics Canada	The Statistics Act provides wide data access and collection authority for the Agency coupled with strict confidentiality protections that provide some barriers to data sharing and external access. Privacy (personal information) and intellectual property (proprietary data) laws add responsibility to protect data from unlimited use and disclosure as well.

National Institute of Statistics and Geography (INEGI for its acronym in spanish)	The Federal Law of Transparency and Access to Governmental Public Information guarantees confidential and personal data, and only allows to publish "information needed for statistical, scientific or other general purposes provided by Law, as long as said information is not related to the personal data of the person to whom the information belongs". Unawareness of the users of the place where the information can be found, as well as the topics worked by the National Institute of Statistics and G
Israel Central Bureau of Statistics	Access to all data is subject to a general limitation Section 8 of the Basic Law: Human Dignity and Liberty, requiring that any request or demand for data that impacts on privacy stand by the following criteria: the purpose of the demand/request is reasonable and the impact on privacy does not exceed what is necessary for its purpose. In the transfer of data between public bodies, regulations mandate that each request for the transfer of data be examined by both the party making the request/dema
